From the pastor...

We're making good progress for the Festival. Almost all the yard signs have been placed, just a few left in the vestibules. All but 18, of the 125 cake mixes, have been picked up for baking. The last few are on the table in the back of church. There are also still quite a number of food basket suggestion cards on the table in the back. We always run out of food baskets for that booth. If you can make an additional one, it will help. A lot of school and parish families have volunteered to work booths. Of course we always need more volunteers to make it easier for all.

We are trying to be more welcoming to our school families and neighborhood by serving some Hispanic foods: tacos, Mexican corn on the cob, and chicharrónes. There will also be some Hispanic music this year.

The city surprised us with new safety regulations for festivals this year. Trying to comply has been quite a burden for the festival leadership. My gratitude to them for the extra hard work.
